Stone artefacts such as these were used to make tools for a variety of purposes. Before the European invasion, Aborigines lived a relatively peaceful life at Risdon Cove. With its abundance of food and shelter it was a popular Aboriginal hunting ground.

This small sailor was carved as a trinket, probably by seamen. It shows the typical dress of eighteenth century mariners. Like the other objects displayed here archaeologists excavated it from Dr Mountgarrett's hut at Risdon Cove.

Instructions

The working of the Semaphore
in its present form by extending the arms at different angles
will be found to be very simple
and easily comprehended that the Commandant trusts there will be no mistakes made at the different posts in passing
the signals and as signal books
are defective and are required
to be strictly and carefully
kept by registering every number taken reference thereto
will at once show where any error or negligence has occurred.

The Semaphore has three lines of arms the upper line
of which will represent the Units is 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9.

No Cypher is necessary as the centre line represents Tens
and the lower line Hundreds
each of the three lines are worked in precisely the same manner as that of the Diagrams
below.

The following Diagrams will further elucidate the System of the Code—

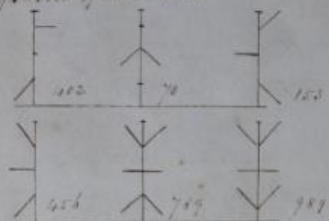

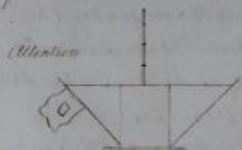

Diagram illustrating a simple frame structure. The structure consists of two vertical columns and a horizontal beam. The columns are labeled "Numerical" and the beam is labeled "g g g g g g".

— It may not be improper to remark that an alteration in the foregoing has taken place by the substitution of a Director Flag for the Chequered

Pursuant when numerals are required but not affecting the use of the Chequers pursuant for the thousands.

The Blue petre is the
only Flag used as above

The Blue Peter at the Yard arm for attention that a communication is wished
to be made to some post or posts which will be answered
by the next post or posts in
a similar manner—

The next signal that will be made is the number of the Post wished to be communicated with or if the communication wished is general No. 29 or "all houses" will be made.

—We prevent the arms being unnecessarily extruded before the necessary posts are ready for instance should the communication from the settlement be to Eagle Hawk neck or Hopewell main the intermediate posts will keep the Attention flag flying until they see that it has been answered by the distant posts required to be communicated with. The same is equally

FREE LABOUR UNIONS.

A meeting of the Union was held at Mr. Campion's, "Jolly Hatters," Melville-street, on Monday evening last, the same having been called by public advertisements and placards. About one hundred and fifty were present. The chair was taken by Mr. M'Cann, (a master-bricklayer,) at half-past seven.

PUBLIC NOTICE.

THE Hobart town Carpenters' and Joiners' Benefit Society House of Call, at Mr. Wm. Champion's, 'Jolly Hatters,' Melville street.

Builders in town and country, private individuals, &c. are most respectfully requested to make their call for men at the above place, stating the number, and whether carpenters or joiners, or both.

Prompt attention to every call.

LICENSED VICTUALLERS' SOCIETY.—A general meeting of the members of this excellent institution was held at Mr. Champion's, "Jolly Hatters," on Wednesday evening. Mr. Davies, of the "Union," was called to the chair. Mr. Ulmer, of the "Dorchester Butt," being about to leave the trade, resigned his appointment as a member of the committee of management, and Mr. Davies was unanimously elected in his stead. An order was made that all outstanding accounts be called in, and other resolutions adopted, having the object of carrying out the designs of this excellent society with increased spirit. Five new members were enrolled—Messrs. Dudgeon, Bell, Hedditch, Donaldson, and Edson. The meeting was adjourned to Tuesday next, at Mr. Bassett's, "Tasmanian Inn."

TRADES' UNION

ON Tuesday evening last, a Meeting of this Union was held at Mr. Champion's, the Jolly Hatters, for the purpose of presenting the Ex-President of that body, Mr. WILLIAM JEFFEREY, with a Silver Medal, as a mark of their approbation of his conduct while President. The Meeting was fully attended, and after the Chair had been taken, Mr. ALLPORT, Solicitor, after making a very elegant and appropriate speech, delivered the Medal to Mr. JEFFEREY. It is a very handsome piece of workmanship, executed by that talented artist, Mr. CHARLES JONES, silversmith and jeweller, Murray-street; it bore the following inscription:—

"United we stand—

"Divided we fall."

"Presented to Mr. WM. JEFFEREY,

C 300 HBT. HOBART FROM LIME KILN HILL

THE BELLS.—We beg to call the attention of the public to the meeting that will be held this evening, at Mr. Champion's, Melville-street, respecting the best means to be procured for hanging the bells in Trinity Church.

Bell Ringing.

THE undersigned, having promised to do all in his power to form a company of ringers for the new bells in Trinity Church Belfry, will feel obliged by the attendance at his house, on TUESDAY EVENING, the 10th August, at seven o'clock, of those who are desirous of assisting in such an object, as ringers.

W. CHAMPION, Jolly Hatters.

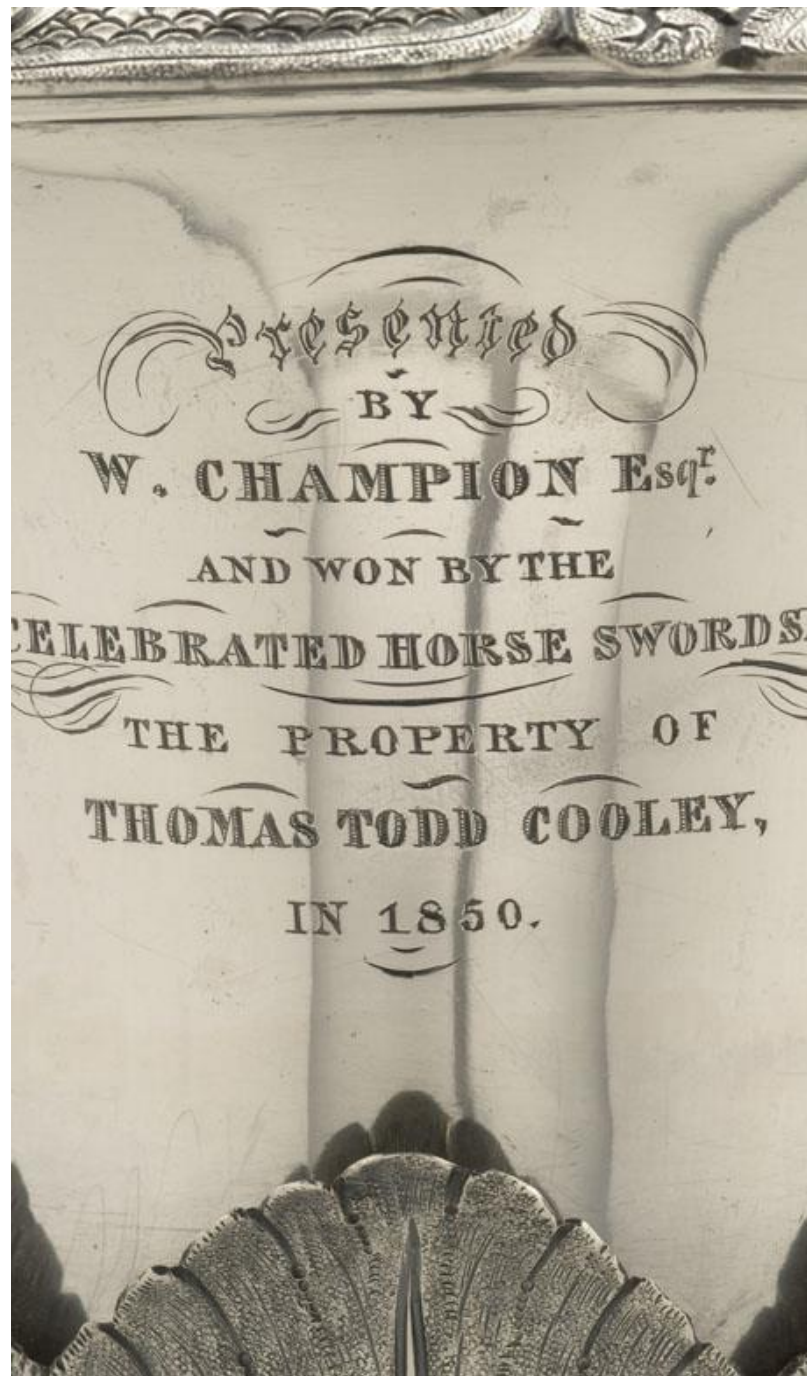

Melville-street, July 19.

Local Intelligence.

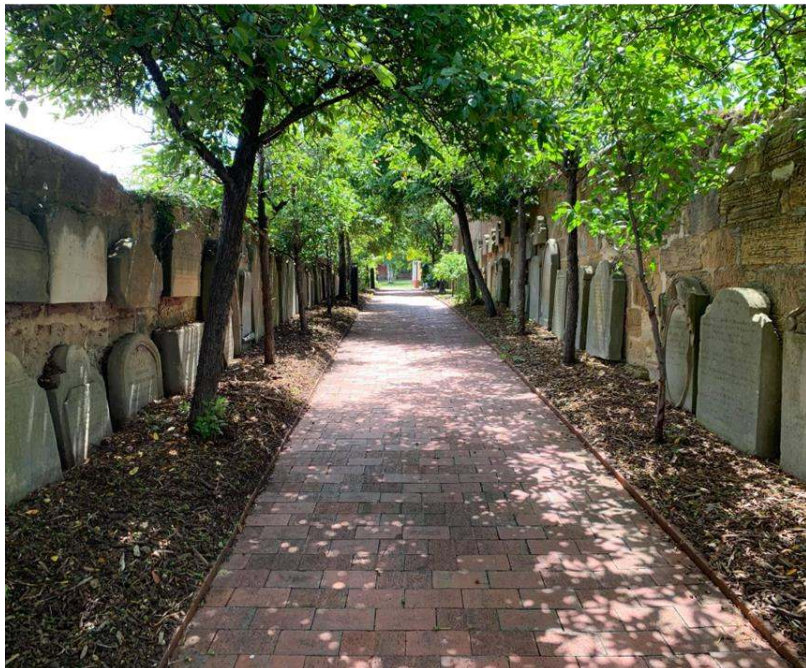

THE BELLS rung a merry peal at half-past three, a. m. yesterday morning. The following were the ringers:—No. 1 Norton, 2 Champion, Jun., 3 Davis, 4 Creswell, Jun., 5 Hilton, 6 Bastian, 7 Mitson, and 8 W. G. Beaumont.

We were promised a "right merrie peal" from the tower of Trinity Cathedral, and peal upon peal we had to a certainty, commencing at daybreak, and rattling away till broad sunshine and afterwards, disturbing the morning slumbers of the somnolent, but cheering the early riser with the glad anticipation of the approaching festival. Next came the signal-gun from the battery, at eight o'clock, answered by those of the vessels in the harbour; and at nine o'clock another peal of the church bells announced the starting of the flotilla, or rather what ought to have been a flotilla; for in this respect there was a sad falling off in this, one of the most interesting portions of the amusements. There was the Governor's barge, it is true; and there was the band in the boat; and both were towed to the Regatta ground by the steamer, with colours flying, and so on; but the wide cavalcade of whale-boats and gigs, which in former times almost reached across the river, was wanting, the several boats rowing to the ground in any way their respective crews pleased.

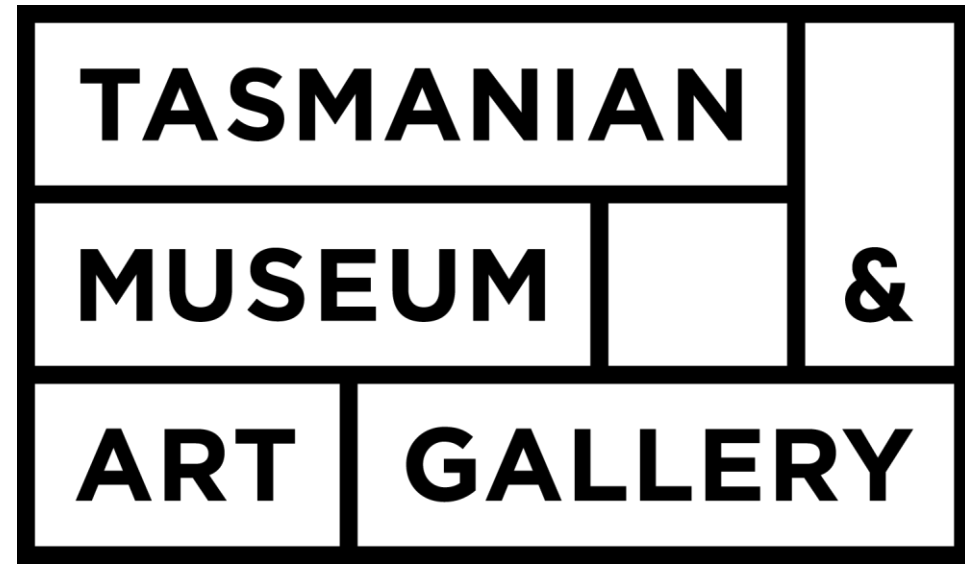

THE LATE MR. CHAMPION.—Scarcely had the grave closed over one of our oldest fellow-colonists when the ceaseless hand of death removed another from amongst us. Mr. William Champion, so well known throughout the colony, died yesterday morning at his residence in Burnett-street, in the forty-eighth year of his sojourn in this Island, and in the 71st year of his age. The deceased was a useful colonist in his day, and it may be interesting to mention that he produced, from his own hands, the first hat that was ever made in this colony, starting business in his trade shortly after he landed in the year 1824 in a small stuccoed cottage, up two or three steps, just opposite the Elephant and Castle in Bathurst-street. There, on the 6th of August in the year aforesaid, the first Tasmanian beaver was sent into the sunshine on the head, strange to say, of one who still survives in Mr. Isaac Froud, of the Native Corners.

The article in question, and now far beyond all question we suppose, was formed of wool, and the hair of the silver-grey rabbits, which animals had been only a year or two before introduced to the colony, and set at liberty on Betsy's, now called Franklin, Island, by one Captain King, who, for some time afterwards, made money of the skins in the China market. The hat trade failing, Mr. Champion commenced business as an hotel-keeper, and for a long, long time the Jolly Hatters, in Melville-street, was the home of most of the opulent settlers when they visited the metropolis. The good old man's success in life enabled him to afford spirited and benevolent assistance on many occasions, and, although he never mentioned the matter himself, we happen to be aware that the Trinity bells, which chime so sweetly over the city on gala days, owe to his liberality something like one hundred and twenty-five pounds, that sum having been contributed by Mr. Champion towards the expenses of their suspension, and never repaid to this day. He died of the decay of nature, and without a pang or a struggle.
